After almost 500 years,
the American forest is still three-fourths as large as it was when Columbus landed.

It's hard to believe, but it's a fact. After supplying so much of the material and the land to build America's houses and cities and highways, after meeting our constantly growing demands for paper products, our forest is still 761 million acres big.

How have we been able to do so much and still have so much?

In the first place, trees are a renewable resource. They grow back, again and again. In fact, about the only way to remove a forest permanently is to remove the land itself. By paving it, for example, or covering it with a lake.

We've also been able to add to America's present forest-land by reclaiming land previously lost to other uses, including millions of acres of marginal farmland. And to supplement natural planting, we're planting trees ourselves: more than a million and a half acres of forest a year—and more than one tree for every tree we use.

We've developed new methods to grow more timber faster on the same land base, too. For example, the forest products industry owns less than 9% of all the American forest. Yet this land provides the raw material for one-third of our wood and paper products.

A renewable resource, responsibly managed. New forests. And better ways of growing more timber faster. Almost 500 years and a new nation later, they're all helping to keep America green. And growing.
